VIEW OF PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

THE

BRYANT, STRATTON & SADLER BUSINESS COLLEGE

IS now entering upon its 21st year, during which time it has been under the fostering care of Prof. W. H. Sadler, its founder and president. Over twenty years of hard, unceasing labor have been devoted to building up to its high standard of excellence the BRYANT, STRATTON & SADLER BUSINESS COLLEGE, and it may be safely said that to-day it is the largest and most successful strictly private school in the entire South. No stronger evidence of its popularity and usefulness can be presented than the fact that its pupils by thousands can be found in all sections of the country discharging the duties of intelligent and successful business men.

The past year has again shown an increase in our patronage. Our patrons are among the wisest and best thinkers of this country, who have accorded us their strongest endorsement. With such a past, we are justified in the pride we take in our Institution; and while we return our thanks for the generous appreciation accorded our efforts, we are proud to think that appreciation has been honestly earned. So too, we hold it to be sufficiently demonstrated by facts, that the theoretical and practical features combined in our system of instruction secure to the student the very best business education attainable anywhere in the world.

Experience has proved beyond a doubt that the system of training in this school has given to its pupils habits of exactness, punctuality and dispatch, which have been great helps toward their promotion and success in after life.

Those who are prompted to investigate the matter will find here some assurance that we possess facilities and experience which cannot fail to secure a valuable return to any who may favor our Institution with their patronage.

VISITORS ALWAYS WELCOME.

It will well repay the time and trouble of a visit to our rooms to witness the absorbing attention of the students, who are eagerly engaged in dealings with each other, and who are required to keep a strict and systematic account of all their transactions, and settle their daily or monthly balances. The remark is frequently made by visitors, that never before had they seen such absorbing interest on the part of pupils in any school. We cordially invite parents and others who are interested, to call and examine our superior facilities for thorough instruction in business affairs, and we feel confident that no one will go away without having a higher appreciation of business education, and greater confidence and a livelier interest in our school.

There is just enough novelty about the course of instruction to interest students, and they generally become intensely interested before they are aware of it. We refer with great satisfaction to the hundreds—we might truly say thousands—of our graduates and former pupils who are holding prominent positions and are engaged in active business in this city and throughout the entire country.

We are gratified to know that this institution is held in such high esteem by the business men of this city. They are our strongest friends and best supporters, and not only patronize the College by sending their own sons and recommending others to take a business course, but apply to us for book-keepers and other assistants whenever they need them.

For the convenience of those who cannot visit us, we have briefly described in the following pages our course of study, plan of instruction, and facilities offered.

Merit, the basis of honorable success.

Our School

IS designed to educate for the practical affairs of every-day life, and not alone to prepare its pupils simply to become clerks and bookkeepers, but also to impart such a broad culture as is now demanded by the progressive nature of the nineteenth century.

BRANCHES TAUGHT.

OUR Course of Study affords a training for business pursuits, provides special opportunities for mental drill and discipline, and brings the pupil in daily contact with those things which are of every-day use in the future.

The system, broader and brighter than the old-time one of "learning a trade," more simple and direct than the so-called liberal education, insists that a good education must be based upon such branches of study as will enable the student to earn a living when beginning life on his own account.

From the training afforded in this school, graduates enter fresh upon business pursuits as skilful as those who serve years of apprenticeship in the store, besides having the added and incalculable advantage of educated faculties.

BUSINESS COURSE.

THE all-pervading necessity of a cultivation of the business faculties is far greater than is recognized at a first glance. The influences derived from a course of instruction in such an institution as ours are beneficially applicable to the career of every young man in the country, no matter what may be his chosen profession or what his lot in life. It puts the mental faculties in practical working order, accustoms the mind to that habit of comparison the operation of which utilizes as well as helps in creating the knowledge-stock of the world.

It bestows presence of mind, begets quickness of perception, readiness and accuracy in calculation, and a systematic habit in the management of affairs. It teaches the law of contracts and the usages of business life. It implants a readiness in handling figures which is of incalculable importance to all who expect to come in practical contact with the world in any capacity.

In short, it drills the perceptive and reasoning faculties, and makes of the student an intelligent man, prepared to fill his duties in any sphere of life. In a country like ours, such a one alone is of value as a citizen, aside from all considerations of his own welfare, or that of those whose fortunes are connected with his own.

While the general supervision of the College, its discipline and care, rest with the President, he is assisted by a large corps of experienced instructors laboring in their special departments. This systematic division into is a distinctive feature of the Institution, and is more thoroughly worked out, and brought to a higher state of perfection here than ever before reached in any similar institution; bringing the art of imparting specific detailed knowledge in every branch of business study into a nicely adjusted and perfectly balanced scientific action.

The effect of this division is to secure teachers of greater ability than are usually found in schools, while it reacts powerfully upon the pupils, and tends to a higher excellence in every department, exciting the enthusiasm of both teacher and pupil to a degree scarcely attainable when dissimilar studies are committed to the same hands. Hence, competent and for each department is the rule absolutely necessary to carry out this plan; each instructor is carefully selected with special reference to his proficiency in the particular department entrusted to his care, while his efficiency in imparting his knowledge is enhanced by constant practice and experience.

By devoting a prescribed time each day to each branch of his studies, and profitably diversifying the day with different but suitable systems, the student acquires distinct impressions, readily retains them, and becomes thoroughly familiar with all.

BOOKKEEPING.

A FIRST-CLASS Accountant is at the head of this department, supported by a large corps of able Assistants. The art or science of Bookkeeping is not the exclusive or essential feature of a business education, but it is the most important of these features. For this reason, the Institution lays great stress upon the faithful inculcation of this important science. Every facility, every modern appliance, every device of invention and ingenuity will be found applied in our improved system, which business men and accountants have pronounced at once the simplest, most practical, accurate, and best ever put in use.

ACTUAL BUSINESS.

THIS department is in charge of a practical accountant, an actual business man, with able Assistants. A miniature Business World in itself, this department is a field for thorough, practical application of the principles and methods of business. It is the most complete and effective plan yet devised for familiarizing the student with the ways and walks of the commercial world. Its transactions are actual, and just as they occur in the everyday movements of business. In it, the student occupies in turn every position known to the personnel of commerce, from Shipping-clerk to Capitalist. Now a Bookkeeper or Accountant, he is at another time a Salesman or Bank-teller, and in turn a Merchant, Broker, Cashier, Banker, Manager, etc., in actual control of the business attached to his department, which is divided up into sub-departments of Merchandizing, Commercial Correspondence, Brokerage, Exchange and Collection, Banking, etc. The activity of reality is given, as it could be given in no other way, through the medium of the department of

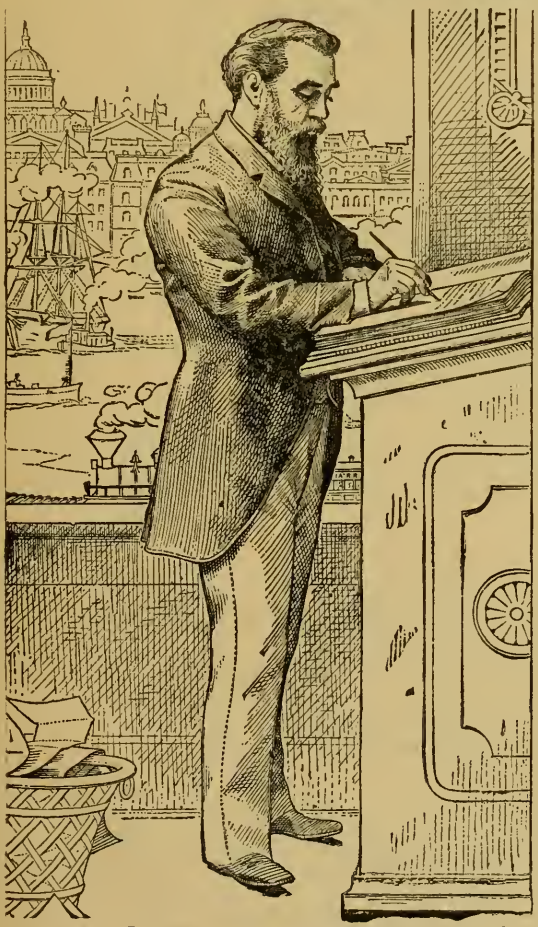
Say little; think much; do more.

INTERCOMMUNICATION.

THIS feature is enjoyed through permanent connection with the International Business College Association of Business Colleges, located in thirty-four of the principal cities of the United States and Canada, where our membership enables our students to carry on business with actual correspondents in all the great business centres of two nations, to make and to receive actual daily shipments and consignments of merchandise, to import and export wares and products, to draw and deal in Bills of Exchange and Commercial paper, and to enter into and take practical part in transactions, from the most simple to the most intricate and complex known to the machinery of finance and commerce.

The facilities thus afforded for improvement in the daily habituation with the details of business, the constant application of theory to practice, the solid implanting of cardinal business principles, and the knowledge of business peculiarities, differences in currencies, exchanges, and modes of dealing in various sections of the country, by actual contact therewith, are not to be supplied by any other method.

PENMANSHIP.



Approved Position for Writing at a Standing Desk.

THIS DEPARTMENT is in charge of the best teachers of that art in the country. The professor who presides over this department is absolutely without a rival in the art, and has awakened more interest in the subject, and at the same time produced more satisfactory results than ever before in the long history of our institution. This is not only our opinion, but it is the endorsement accorded by our patrons and pupils, as well as that of the business community.

In every case a neat, business-like hand and rapid style is taught and acquired. Careful attention at all times is given by teachers to correct position, movement, knowledge of principles, slant and size, grouping and spacing of letters and proper proportions. Principles used in the formation of figures, abbreviations and marks used in business, receive special attention, and are illustrated by the Professor on the blackboard in imparting instruction to his pupils.

So we pass, step by step, on through the alphabet, from the simplest to the most complicated letters, developing each as we pass in beauty of form and rapidity of motion, until we have covered the whole field of small letters, capitals and figures, forming letters, words, sentences and pages, striving with the most intelligent effort to bring the fingers, hand and arm under complete control of the will, until a good handwriting becomes an established fact.

Our students are noted everywhere for the grace and finish of their chirography, and are highly appreciated in consequence as clerks or bookkeepers.

With a view to demonstrate the superiority of the advantages of our Penmanship Department we have had photo-engraved, from the original, fac-similes of the handwriting of a few pupils, showing their style of writing before and after receiving instruction in our school.

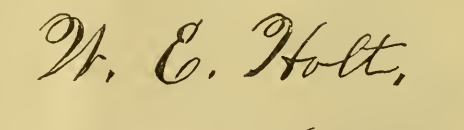
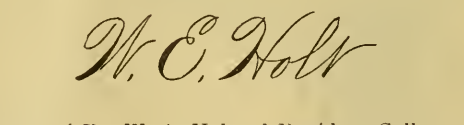
Evan L. Yandle, of Hebron, N. C., is deserving of special mention for his remarkable progress in penmanship.

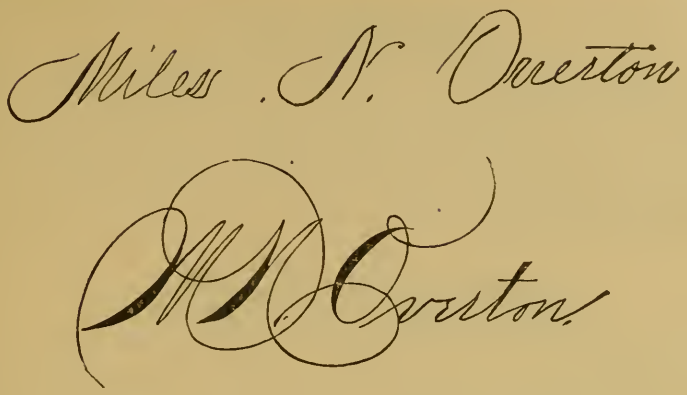




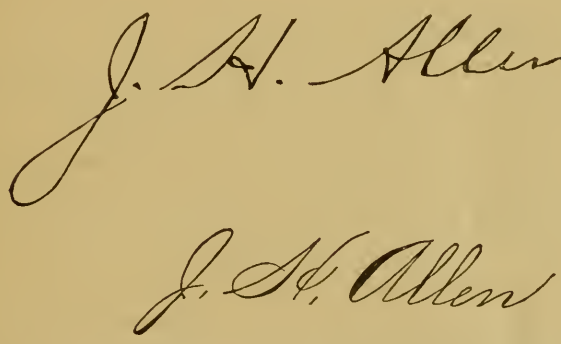
Mr. Wm. E. Holt, son of Dr. W. A. Holt, of Davidson College, N. C., had been in attendance less than three months when his signature showing the marked improvement in his writing was written.

Mr. Andrew Bradshaw, son of Capt. J. B. Bradshaw, Hopewell Station, Md., acquired his improved style of writing during an attendance of about seven months.

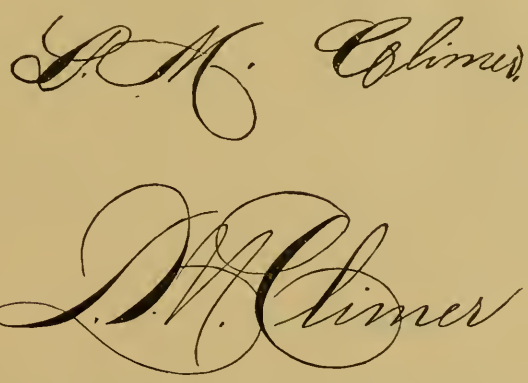
Business neglected is business lost.



Mr. Miles N. Overton, of Lilly, N. C., had been under our tuition less than four months when his specimen showing improvement was written.



Mr. J. H. Allen, of Scottsburg, Va., shows what he can accomplish in less than four months' work with us in the department of penmanship.



The improvement shown by Mr. L. M. Climer, of Gibsonville, N. C., was acquired in three months. He was a most diligent pupil and is now reaping the result of his application, having returned to his old position at Gibsonville, N. C., at an increase of double the salary received before attending our school.

This age demands practical men.

MATHEMATICS.

THE Professor in charge of this department is a graduated mathematician, thorough alike in theory and practice. Separate and special in its features, this department offers the student an education in mathematics as comprehensive as that of any collegiate institution in the country, and vastly more practical in character.

Commercial calculations and

come under this head, and here the lecture plan, illustrated by blackboard demonstrations, is applied in class and general exercises, to develop its principles, and show their practical application to business problems. This is a feature possessed in no other similar institution, the advantages of which are absolutely essential to the success of the accountant and business man.

Students are drilled in all the Short Methods until they can handle numbers with ease and rapidity, and with the accuracy of experts.

This department receives the special attention of Prof. W. H. Sadler, the senior author of "Sadler's Counting House Arithmetic," the most complete and exhaustive work yet published on the subject of Practical Business Calculations.

Each pupil in the school may be found at least one hour every day in this department discharging the duties assigned to him the previous day, and receiving instruction through blackboard illustrations in the most rapid and approved methods of commercial calculations.

It is in this department that exactness in the performance of each duty is required, and nothing short of exactness in the fullest sense of the term passes for any worth.

With a large majority of pupils the idea seems to prevail that if they understand the theory of the work to be performed, or the principles upon which the question is based, that nothing further is necessary, but in fact a vast amount of drill is found necessary before they are able to execute the work needed, correctly and promptly.

With the business man, theory is well enough in its proper place; but if the young aspirant for business honors cannot execute correctly and rapidly the work placed before him, his theoretical knowledge will avail him nothing whatever.

Parents are here notified that it is the desire of the President and teachers that pupils should devote time enough to home study, each day, to prepare the following day's lessons. In cases where the pupil's health and circumstances will permit, home study will be found to promote rapid progress very materially.

COMMERCIAL LAW.

A PRACTICING lawyer, of high standing at the Baltimore Bar, presides over this department. The importance of an acquaintance with the principles of common business law has come to be so generally recognized among business men, that an institution which does not make instruction therein a feature is naturally regarded with distrust. Here, it is done whenever it can be done in our course. The oral and practical plans of instruction are combined. Illustrated lectures are delivered before the students, in which the underlying principles of contracts, usage, liability, forms of business papers, responsibility of endorser, necessity of protests, partnerships special and general, contracts, rights of property, etc., are made clear, to be subsequently impressed in class recitations, and practiced in the actual business department. This is regarded as one of the strong features of this Institution, and its importance cannot well be overestimated.

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE.

COMMERCIAL Letter Writing, an art indispensably necessary to the accurate and satisfactory transaction of business, receives particular attention in our course. Brevity, besides being the soul of wit, is the essence of business correspondence. To say exactly what is meant, in unequivocal terms, without unnecessary words, and leaving no room for misapprehension, is the object of business correspondence. The ability to do this is of course acquired, and comes with practice and good teaching. Once acquired it is a recommendation in itself, for nothing is so fruitful of mischief and trouble as inexperience, uncertainty, or ambiguity of expression in business affairs, and the ability to write a real business letter is highly prized in commercial circles. In connection with this, style, grammar, phrasing and spelling receive all needed attention, to make instruction in the art thorough at all points. Indeed, pains are taken throughout our course to supplement and supply any insufficiencies and omissions in the common school education of students, so that they become distinguished as well for the use of their native tongue as for their practical knowlege of business affairs.

COURSE EXAMINATIONS.

STUDENTS are passed from one department to another, through examinations, not too frequent to be irksome, and yet carefully adapted to the purpose of fixing and realizing instruction already had. Their past work is reviewed, and their standing and grounding assured as they go along, by a special system exactly opposed to the harassing and utterly inutile routine of the cram and rote plan, the vicious results of which are simply to bewilder and cumber the mind and disgust the pupil. This ordeal, which is almost invariably dreaded by the student elsewhere, is looked forward to here with anticipation of pleasure and gratification. He knows it to be an added opportunity to mark his progress and fix the results gained, as well as clear up in his mind anything which has before been imperfectly grasped or cloudily comprehended. It makes certain of holding what has been attained, and mounting to the next step from a sure foundation. In these exercises the principle of personal instruction, which pervades our system as it is found nowhere else, is again applied thoroughly, and the Professor passes his pupil in the knowledge that he is informed upon his studies, not merely drilled in the unreasoning exercise of memory.

Difficulties, like thieves, often disappear when we face them.

Night Sessions

Of our School will begin on the 1st of October and continue until April 1st of the succeeding year.

THE night sessions of THE BRYANT, STRATTON & SADLER BUSINESS COLLEGE are arranged for the convenience of those who cannot give day-time to the studies they wish to pursue with us. They invariably attract earnest and attentive workers, and result in incalculable benefit to students. Many an enterprising young man, passing his days in the pursuit of some humble avocation to earn his daily bread, has utilized his spare evening hours to fit himself here for higher and better things, and has thus been able to command a success that was impossible through any other plan. All the features of our day instruction are reproduced in the night sessions, and the advantages we offer to students of one class are accorded fully to those of the other.

We make every effort to advance our evening students rapidly and satisfactorily. There are no classes, and if a student is unable to enter at the opening hour he may come in at any time and receive instruction the remainder of the evening and without delay. Each student is taught separately at his desk, and thus avoids the embarrassment arising from a consciousness of backwardness and ignorance, and at the same time is able to advance as rapidly as possible.

Separate instruction may be obtained in Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Rapid Calculations, Business Correspondence, Phonography; one or more of which may be taken according to the needs and desire of the student.

Young men having situations, and desiring to advance their business relations, should be able to respond to the following with confidence:

Are you an accomplished penman? Can you "average" accounts?
Are you an expert bookkeeper? Can you make partnership settelments?
Are you thorough in double entry? Are you an accurate correspondent?
Do you know commercial arithmetic? Can you draw up business papers?
Do you know counting-room practice?
Are you gaining ground and securing an independence?
What valuable service can you render in exchange for a higher salary?
Are you using any part of your income, or devoting any part of your time to preparing for earning a higher salary?
Do you know when out of work you cannot successfully compete with others, unless you are their superiors in attainments?

If you can answer the above questions satisfactorily, go on your way rejoicing.

But if these questions perplex and trouble you, make prompt arrangements for training, either day or night, at the

BRYANT, STRATTON & SADLER BUSINESS COLLEGE.

During the twenty years since the establishment of this Institution it has been well known to the citizens of Baltimore and to the people of the United States. Its halls have always been thronged with ambitious students, who have gone forth to their life-work, commending it to relatives, friends, and acquaintances, who have in turn secured for themselves within its walls a practical education.

It is never too late to learn.

Regulations and Terms.

WHEN TO COMMENCE.

THERE are no term divisions or vacations. The students' time, as to convenience may be consulted. They can enter at any time, and pursue their course of study as rapidly as their abilities will permit. A common-school education is all the educational preparation required to enter the College.

DISCIPLINE.

Parents, in placing young men in our school, can feel assured that they will be under the most careful discipline, and that no efforts will be spared to fit them for future usefulness. One of the most important lessons for a young man to learn is punctuality; therefore, in all cases we insist upon it in the school. Our aim is to form correct business habits, as well as to impart instruction in business affairs. Hence, we demand from each pupil punctual attendance, prompt attention to duties, neatness in all his work, and gentlemanly conduct toward both teachers and fellow-pupils. Habits formed at school usually adhere closely during life; hence too great care cannot be exercised. Such rules and regulations only are made as are required to guide the student pleasantly and prosperously in his relations and work toward self-governing, substantial business manhood. He is simply expected:—

1st. To attend strictly to his own business as the only means of success in life.
2d. To be prompt, systematic, thorough and conscientious.
3d. To cultivate the sentiments and manners of a true business gentleman.

ATTENDANCE.

Students are required to be regular in their attendance, and if absent, must report said absence to the Professor in charge of the department to which they belong.

BRYANT, STRATTON & SADLER BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Dear Sir:—It affords me great pleasure to testify as to the value of the course of instruction of your excellent Business College. Having been acquainted since its establishment with the general method of teaching and instruction, and having very closely observed it more recently, from the fact of entering one of my sons in your College, I can with confidence recommend it to the public as worthy of most liberal patronage and support. The plan adopted for instruction in Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Lectures on Commercial Law, and other subjects, affords very valuable instruction to the pupils, familiarizing them with the rules and usages of trade by a course of actual business training, fits them for the duties of any station in life they may be called upon to assume. Wishing you a continuance of the successful career you have already attained, I am,

Very truly yours,
FRANCIS P. STEVENS.

BALTIMORE, July 13, 1883.

MR. W. H. SADLER, President, &c.

Dear Sir:—It affords me pleasure to congratulate you on the success of the Bryant, Stratton & Sadler Business College.

I consider it a most valuable institution to our community. A city largely depends for its prosperity on its commerce and manufactures, neither of which can be successfully carried on without a thorough system of accounts. An institution like yours where accounts and business affairs are so admirably taught, is therefore both necessary and beneficial. I hope your past success will be an encouragement for continuing the good work of your College, and thus affording facilities for the youth of Baltimore to obtain a thorough business education I am,

Very respectfully yours,

Dear Sir:—Having had a son at your school, and having now in our employ some of your old students, I can say that your Commercial School is unexcelled in the country. I have been through your school, and seen the wonderful order and system with which it is worked. A boy going through its curriculum is certainly well qualified for a business career whether in or out of the office, his education is perfect in these respects. Among our correspondents we can frequently see the style of writing and figures which are prevalent at your school, performed, doubtless, by your former students. In a word, not wishing to disparage others, I can commend your College to the public most cheerfully, knowing it has no superior.

Yours truly,

Our References.

THE space at our command enables us to present the names of only a few of the prominent professional and business men of this city, and elsewhere, who have had sons and wards under our tuition. These gentlemen, by a continuous patronage extending over a period of nearly twenty years, have had the amplest opportunities of practically testing the merits and utility of the Bryant, Stratton & Sadler Business College. Their character and sagacity, and their ability to discriminate, afford the most conclusive evidence that our claims to public confidence are well founded, as well as a guide in selecting a school that fully meets the demands of this practical, progressive age. Few institutions in this country can offer such a record, and to them, with pardonable pride, we refer.

VIEW OF BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

It will pay to take

A

SHORT, PRACTICAL AND COMPLETE COURSE OF Business Training.

STARTING IN THE WORLD.

MANY an unwise parent labors hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of leaving enough to give his children a start in the world, as it is called. Setting a young man afloat with money left him by his relatives, is like tying bladders under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose his bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim, and he will never need the bladders. Give your child a sound business education, and you have done enough for him. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature subservient to laws which govern man, and you have given what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies.

THE MANAGEMENT

OF THE BRYANT, STRATTON & SADLER BUSINESS COLLEGE rests entirely with its President, MR. W. H. SADLER, the founder, and who has for nearly a fifth of a century directed the work and established for the School a reputation and standing second to no similar institution in America. The College is a pronounced success, possessing abundant resources at its command to make any improvement needed, or to enlarge its sphere of action to meet the growing demands made upon its facilities for imparting a thoroughly practical education

"GERMAN CORRESPONDENT"

AS AN

ADVERTISING MEDIUM,

Reaching, as it does, all classes of our own citizens, and being the only Daily German Paper published in Baltimore. Apart from its very extensive circulation in this City and State, it has numerous patrons in all parts of the United States, (South and West,) in Washington, D.C., Alexandria, Va., Pennsylvania, etc., and in Europe. Is regarded and recognized as the organ of the large German population of this State and south of Philadelphia, numbering among its subscribers people of all classes and occupations. Its low rates for advertisements, as compared with other leading German and English Papers, its entertaining literary columns, its special and Associated Press Dispatches, (both foreign and domestic,) its promptness, enterprise and careful supervision, commend it as a most popular and valuable channel by which it reaches the Business and Family Circles of the country. Advantages must accrue to the business men in general, who add the "CORRESPONDENT" to the list of papers in which they advertise, as advertisements translated into the German language must naturally attract the attention of many who prefer to gather information from a paper printed in their langauge and thoroughly understood by them.
